Washington, DC—The District of Columbia Department of Behavioral Health (DBH) is accepting applications for the 2014 peer specialist certification training class. The deadline for applying is February 28, 2014.

To be eligible for consideration, an applicant must self-identify as receiving or previously receiving behavioral health services within the Department of Behavioral Health network, have demonstrated personal recovery, and the ability to help others with their recovery. In addition, an applicant must be at least 18 years of age with a high school diploma or equivalent and a District resident. The six-week certification program ensures that valuable peer supports services meet acceptable standards. Participants learn how to help individuals receiving mental health or substance use treatment develop goals, monitor their own progress and advocate for effective services. The peer specialist certification program also helps prepare individuals to qualify for available peer specialist jobs within the DBH community provider network. Under general supervision, a certified peer specialist performs a wide range of tasks to assist individuals to regain control over their lives and their own recovery process.

Classes will take place from June 2, 2014 to July 11, 2014 at 64 New York Avenue, NE, Washington, DC. After successful completion of class work, an 80 hour field practicum must be performed with a DBH community based behavioral health provider and completed by September 5, 2014.
